SUMMARY OF INFORMATION:

There is a cool breeze, a smell of salt water, and a lot of blue here. There is a male person with brown hair and a beard. He is tired. He seems to be just sitting there or fishing. There is a red thing that could be a building. There is something that is moving around in a circle. It is really hard to see because it is so dark. There are other people here, at least three or four more. They are just sitting there and watching. I thought they could be praying. There is a large figure that is triangle shape. There is something dark, with a pointed shape. It is cool here, but there is a stinky smell. Something blue, curved and round, reminded me of a balloon. There is something soft, if you touch it, it bounces back. The site reminded me of a mountain atmosphere; water, snow, and a mountain in the background.

THE SPLENDORS OF LURAY CAVERNS. The profusion of formations and variety of natural colors in this underground wonderland are unsurpassed. Discover monumental columns in rooms with ceilings more than 140 feet high—shimmering draperies and glittering, glistening stone, beautiful cascades and crystal-clear pools. You will be fascinated by unique formations such as those resembling “fried eggs” sunny-side up. Be certain to bring your camera to savor the memory of the awe-inspiring grandeur of the largest and most popular cavern in eastern America.
